Ty Kvanvig, Teven Marshall and Lexi Rice have been selected to have their films presented on Saturday, June 6, at 2 p.m. at the American History Film Project showcase.

Their videos are two of only four nationwide chosen. Ty and Teven's video, is a guide to constructing a sod house in the historical manner of the plains dwellers and Lexi Rice's video is an interview regarding an infamous local crime that prompted an investigation nationwide.

The films will be shown along with others from different states. The project's goal is to teach students that they are a fundamental part of their community and history.
